Major CAGED Chords

The CAGED system is a set of open chord shapes that can be moved up and down the neck. The shapes fit together in the order C, A, G, E and D, hence, CAGED. We can use the CAGED system to play any chord in a number of different positions on the neck. If we're to take the D major shape and move it up two frets, you would still be playing the same shape but the chord would now be E major! This is the same principle as the barre chords we learnt already – the E and A shapes – except the C, D and G shapes are a bit more fiddly. Watch the video and let the ideas sink in, then move on to the next lesson, where we will start analysing the shapes.
